Venue

The National Palace of Culture (NDK) in Sofia is the biggest congress centre in South East Europe. Work on the building began in 1979 and was finalised in 1981. Nearly 10 000 t of steel was used in the construction, approximately the same amount as in the Eiffel Tower, as well as 335 000 m<sup>3</sup> of concrete. The project was designed by a team of architects led by Alexander Barov.

Today, the 1980s architecture and monumental art combines with modern art centres, such as the theatre Azaryan, the New Theatre and the art bar Peroto. Apart from a congress centre and host to important political gatherings, the National Palace of Culture is also one of the hot spots of cultural life in Sofia.

The Press centre will be housed inside the National Palace of Culture, accessible for journalists through Entrance B2 (on the side of Fritjof Nansen Str.). It will include working and lounge areas, the venues for the press conference, stand-up positions and booths for TV and radio.
